COVID-19’s impact on the Home & Garden industry
After the first lockdown in 2020, searches surged as people were forced to spend time at their homes.

Home and Garden searches in 2021 are already in double digit growth compared to where they were in 2020.

Consumer engagement is at an all time high

Along with searching, people are engaging more with online content posted - we are seeing this reflected through the growth in clicks.

Year over year (YoY) clicks have grown 51% in 2021.

Yard, garden and patio clicks are trending upward in 2021

In 2019, we saw normal seasonality, an increase in spring and declining volumes as summer ended.

In 2020, searches and clicks exploded during the first lockdown – and over-indexed heavily until August.

2021 click volume seasonality is outpacing search volume, highlighting a high consumer demand and an opportunity for advertisers to take action.
People are planning home projects more than ever

94% of consumers who are planning a home and garden project this year also conducted a home and garden project last year.

67% of consumers have either just started to plan or have made no purchases yet according to a survey released in February 2021.

Interior refreshes are the most planned projects for 2021.
Home & Garden demographic changes YoY

Between 2019 and 2020, we saw double digit growth in the 65+ demographic for both clicks and searches.

This trend is following suit for 2021 with the 65+ demographic holding 34% of the overall Home & Garden clicks.
