Four Emerging Personas

The pandemic has significantly impacted lifestyles. It has changed the ways we work, shop, play, learn and communicate. Consumer behaviors have evolved and reflect new attitudes, values and ultimately, new shopping patterns and expectations. As digital adoption and acceleration has blended work and life, people are finding new ways to care for themselves and their families, support causes they care about, take advantage of the flexibility that has come with remote work and indulge themselves and others a bit, because they have a heightened sense of what's important.

By analyzing Microsoft first-party data and diving deep into consumer research, we've identified four new growing consumer personas:

Digital
Nomad

Luxury
Shopper

Self-Care Enthusiast

Empowered
Activist

We're sharing these new consumer trends and insights to provide a deeper understanding of changing motivations and shopping behaviors across industries and categories, and to provide inspiration and solutions to reach and engage these people throughout their customer journeys. We understand that reaching people who are ready to engage and transact is important. That's why Microsoft Advertising connects you with people at the right moments across work and life.

Digital Nomad

Digital Nomads are location-independent people who value flexibility and make a living working online. Because they work 100% remotely, they're able to travel constantly and move from place to place as long as there's an internet connection.

As shoppers, they use online research across business verticals, perhaps more than any other consumer group. On a recurring basis, they're searching for housing, transportation and all the needs, services and amenities that accompany daily life in new locations.

Digital Nomad

There are 13.2 million travel enthusiasts on Microsoft Advertising globally who stay in an Airbnb or rented accommodation at least once per month.¹

There are 17.4 million travel enthusiasts globally who work remotely and are on Microsoft Advertising.¹

There are 62 million travel enthusiasts globally on Microsoft Advertising who are planning to purchase a vacation abroad.¹

Pro tips:

Use unique travel ad formats to convert the millions¹ of Digital Nomads who are dreaming, planning and booking.

- ✓ Target millions of travel dreamers and planners who are looking to stay at a property like yours. Property Promotion Ads offer a richly engaging, curated experience. Advertisers have full control over the text and images that appear in the ads.
- ✓ Hotel Price Ads help travelers plan and book accommodations by showcasing room rates alongside photos, directions, availability, reviews and more. They also create synergy with your existing text campaigns and provide a highly visual experience to convert travelers during the customer journey.
