COVID-19 trends

COVID-19 has driven consumers online and permanently shifted their behavior.

Consumers are relying on search now more than ever.

The COVID-19 effect

COVID-19 has driven consumers online. A huge spike in search growth occurred as consumers across the U.S. turned to search as a lifeline in the face of COVID-19 restrictions.¹ The result? More people are working, shopping and learning from home. They also have more choices in the digital landscape than ever before.

This, coupled with other lifestyle shifts, has led to an 18% growth in searches on tablets while desktop searches are up 8% when compared with pre-COVID-19 levels.² More people are also using search on the weekend, leading to a 12% increase in volume.¹ That's two times the rate of the weekday search volume growth.¹ Consumers are also searching during nonbusiness hours, specifically between 5 p.m. and 5 a.m.,³ at a rate twice that of regular business hours.¹

Desktop volume share and tablet volume share continue to grow, respectively, at 8% and 18% on average.¹

Weekend volume grew by 12% — 2x that of weekday volume growth.¹

Nonbusiness hours volume (5 p.m.–5 a.m.)³ increased by 11%. That's 2x the rate of volume growth during regular business hours.¹

The shift to e-commerce is here to stay

COVID-19 brought e-commerce to the forefront. Consumers were forced to buy necessities and other retail items online due to store closures and safety concerns. Across the world, this shift pushed consumers online. Analysts predict a nearly 6% increase in digital buyers ages 45 and older in the U.S.,¹ with nearly 150 million new buyers worldwide buying online in 2020.²

And what is their search vehicle of choice? Desktops. Consumers turned to desktops at the start of the pandemic and are continuing to rely on them for their search needs. In fact, nearly 70% of e-commerce sales in Q1 2020 were on desktops.²

Online shopping is expected to become a mainstay for consumers as they adapt to this new way of buying: 31% of U.S. consumers ages 16 to 64 say they will shop online more frequently after COVID-19.¹ Users have become reliant on desktops, a trend that's expected to continue too.¹

Tip: Make sure your website is optimized for search, and that your advertising strategy has search at the forefront.

'Buy online, pick up in store' searches have skyrocketed

As stores closed or implemented safety measures, and concerns for personal safety increased, consumers searched for "buy online, pick up in store (BOPIS)," "curbside pickup," and "click-and-collect" at a much higher rate.¹ Stores implemented these options to allow for shopping and sales to continue.

Users are adapting to BOPIS and are using it when offered.² This new consumer habit provides safety over in-store shopping and lets users pick up products immediately instead of waiting for shipping.

Though the BOPIS search trend seems to be trending down, that's because shoppers now go directly to retailer sites offering it.¹

The BOPIS consumer trend is here to stay.

BOPIS searches surged across retail categories

Categories that contained necessities saw the largest growth in BOPIS as a result of the pandemic, with grocery and mass retailers leading the way.¹

Pet supplies, home and garden, and beauty also saw significant increases in BOPIS shopping.¹

Tip: If you're a brick-and-mortar retailer, implement BOPIS as an option for consumers and highlight it in your campaigns.

Previously popular categories grocery and mass retailers remain #1 and #2, with grocery in the top spot.¹

New significant categories include pet supplies and beauty.¹

Category searches increased, highlighting new consumer needs and interests

As retail searches have increased YoY due to COVID-19 and the homebody economy, certain categories saw more significant growth than others. Food and grocery searches saw a 44% increase YoY, as consumers stay home, search for grocery and food delivery, and go to restaurants much less.¹

With day care shifting to working parents, and remote working and online schooling becoming the new normal, consumers searched for computers and other electronics 36% more YoY.¹ This is most likely to accommodate new at-home needs, such as home offices and entertainment for children and families. The shift to at-home entertainment and work led to the home and garden category seeing a nearly 30% increase in searches YoY.¹

The beauty and personal care category saw a 23% increase in searches YoY¹ as consumers in the U.S. were forced to alter their beauty routines due to COVID-19 closing salons and spas.

With these category and consumer shifts, think about how your business or service can adapt to meet new consumer behaviors and how you can subsequently reach them authentically where they are, on search.

Holiday 2019 trends

Let's look back at last year to see what the 2020 holiday season may hold.

Holiday season remained the king for retail

Consumers spent big for the holidays in 2019. The holiday season continues to be the largest retail shopping season of the year for both consumers and businesses.

Holiday sales surpassed $1 trillion for the first time ever, with 3.7% growth.¹

Not only were consumers spending big in 2019, they were also shopping online more than ever before. E-commerce retail sales grew overall, and home improvement and grocery/beverage categories saw the largest online sales growth YoY.¹

Online sales saw 13.2%¹ sales growth while desktop grew 8%.²

Desktop drove the bulk of the season's spending and purchases

Last year, 60% of all holiday online purchases were made on a desktop.¹ Desktop also drove over two times the conversion rate (CVR) of mobile at 4.3%.² This shows that mobile is more often used for research on the go, whereas shoppers rely on desktops to make their final purchase.

60% of all 2019 online holiday sales were on desktop.¹

75% of all clicks on the Microsoft Search Network were on desktop or tablet.³

Tip: Desktop searching is here to stay, thanks to COVID-19, and it will likely comprise most e-commerce sales in the upcoming season.

Convenience was key for holiday shoppers

Consumers wanted easier holiday shopping in 2019. Free shipping enticed 92% of retail shoppers to buy from retailers offering such deals.¹ During Cyber Week, 86% of e-commerce sales had free shipping.² Consumers also wanted the BOPIS option, which appeals to shoppers looking for immediate gratification and a less hurried shopping experience. This spurred 60% of retailers to implement BOPIS,³ leading to a 35% increase in BOPIS purchases YoY.²

Holiday 2020 forecast

Let's look ahead to see what this year's holiday season has in store.

Insights to reimagine the 2020 holiday season

How will COVID-19 impact retail this holiday season? That's the question on everyone's mind. The pandemic has consumers spending time online, especially on desktops. They're also buying more online. Convenience remains a big selling point. BOPIS will be a key differentiator for shoppers this year and is expected to grow significantly based on both holiday 2019 and COVID-19 shopping trends.

Consumers are also demanding more from the brands they support in terms of shared values, trusted data collection and social activism. Highlight your values to differentiate your brand and build trust, love and loyalty.

Lastly, consumers will delay larger purchases due to economic uncertainties, including holding off on holiday travel because of restrictions and safety concerns.¹

Tip: Your advertising dollars must work harder than ever, and search is the place to be.

The holiday consumer's journey starts with search.

As the pandemic continues, they're relying on it more than ever.

E-commerce and search will grow and be at the forefront for consumers this season.

Consumers will continue to largely use desktop as their purchasing platform.

BOPIS will remain a top shopping option this holiday season.

Differentiate your brand by highlighting your values.

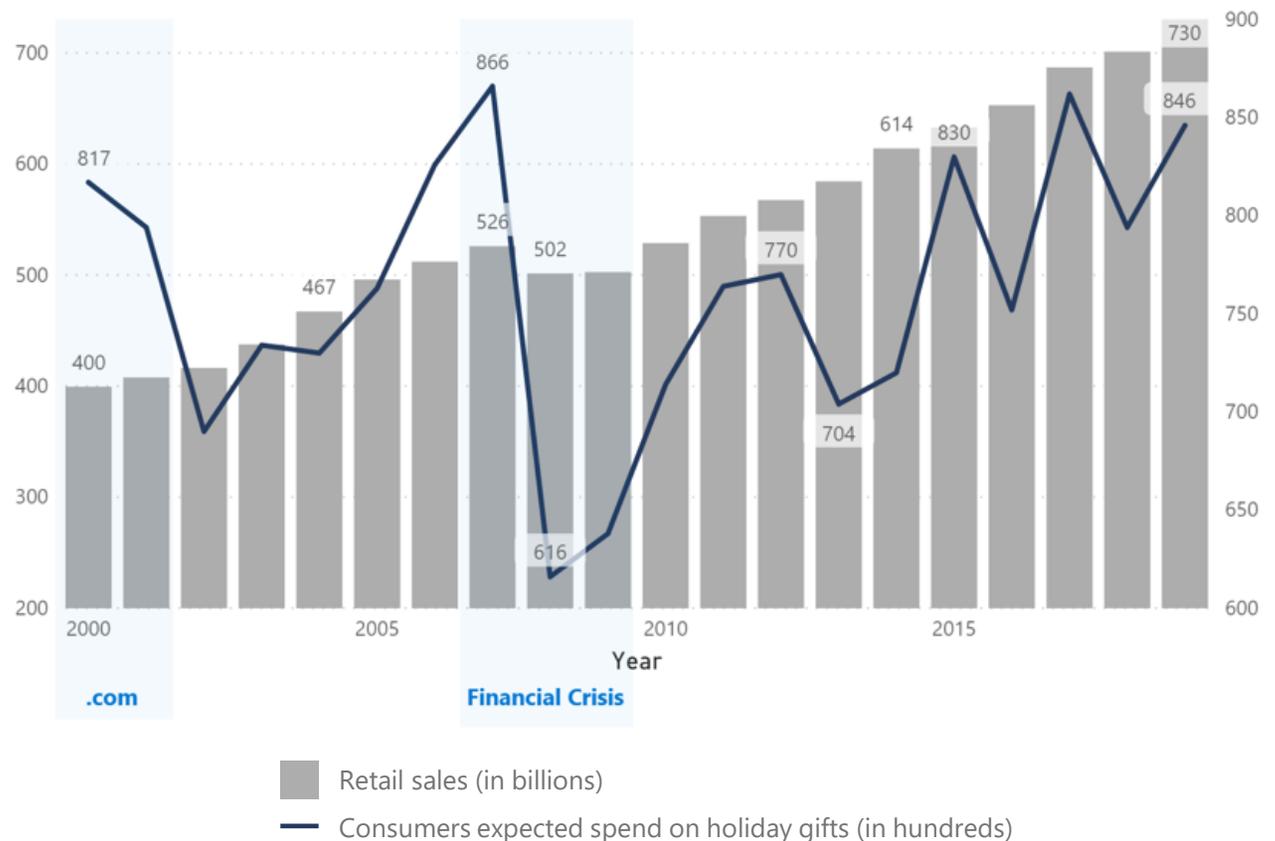

Consumers are delaying larger purchases due to the impact of COVID-19.²

Holiday retail sales often stay strong even when consumers say they're cutting back

Holidays still happen and consumers will still shop and celebrate, usually more than they expect to, regardless of the economy. So, while retail spending may drop this holiday season, it likely won't drop as drastically as consumers expect.¹

During the 2008 financial crisis, consumers reported they would spend 29% less during the holidays in 2008, though retail sales dipped by only 4.7% YoY.²

1. "Telephone interview of 1,015 people ages 18+," Gallup, November 1-14, 2019. 2. "Retail sales in the U.S. from 2000 to 2019 (in billions) months of November and December," National Retail Federation and the U.S. Census Bureau, October 2019.

Consumer preference for online shopping will boost e-commerce sales dramatically

The shift to online shopping during the pandemic will help provide e-commerce growth well above what was predicted at the end of 2019.

While overall retail sales in the U.S. will decrease, online sales will increase significantly across categories.¹ Categories hit hard by COVID-19, such as apparel, are still expected to see e-commerce growth in 2020.¹

Tip: This holiday season, advertisers should focus on e-commerce efforts and reimagine their business digitally.

1. Lipsman, Andrew and Cindy Liu. "U.S. e-commerce 2020," eMarketer, June 8, 2020.

Consumers want contactless shopping

The demand for contactless shopping has been supercharged as consumers prioritize their safety over the in-store shopping experience. Yet it's the convenience of touch-free shopping that analysts believe will cause permanent shifts in consumer behavior. According to eMarketer, 52% of the U.S. population will use BOPIS options in 2020,¹ driving a 60% YoY growth in BOPIS sales.²

Consumers are also changing their holiday shipping expectations, with 81% expecting expedited shipping options.³ It's expected that 44% of U.S. consumers will delay holiday shopping due to expedited shipping options and the expectation that purchases will arrive before the holidays.³

Tip: Implement BOPIS and fast and free shipping options to capture and keep consumer interest.

52% of the U.S. population will use BOPIS in 2020.¹

81% want retailers to offer expedited shipping for holiday shopping.³

44% of consumers will use fast shipping to shop later in the season.³

Plan your campaign around holiday shopping trends

Shoppers will be online and searching even earlier this holiday season, with 19% of U.S. consumers starting their shopping in September or earlier.¹ Consumers have been postponing purchases due to COVID-19, and it's believed those delayed purchases will be made during the holiday season.²

Plan your holiday campaign around shopping trends to improve brand consideration and influence consumer decision-making whether they're researching products or ready to buy. Remember: Search is where consumers start their purchase journey. In fact, 57% of consumers turn to search when they don't have a brand in mind,³ and 91% of searches on the Microsoft Search Network were non-branded in the 2019 holiday season.⁴ Make sure your messaging aligns with key holiday shopping phases and customer journey touch points.

The weeks leading up to Cyber Week see Black Friday and Cyber Monday sales and promotions, with retailers often teasing products well before Thanksgiving week.⁵ And with good reason: Cyber Week draws the most sales and consumer spend of the holiday season.²

September/October

Consumers begin shopping for holidays

- 19% of consumers start shopping in September or earlier.¹
- 39% of consumers start their holiday shopping before November.¹

November

PRE-CYBER WEEK

Retailers release promotions and pre-Black Friday sales

- Offers enter the market in early November to tease Black Friday.³
- Sales begin before Black Friday to entice shoppers.³

CYBER WEEK

Majority of holiday revenue driven during these key dates

- Cyber Monday, Black Friday and Thanksgiving were top 3 e-commerce sales days of the holiday season.²

While being online during Black Friday and Cyber Monday is important, other days within Cyber Week are seeing large YoY growth and lower CPCs.¹ Ensure you're in market well before Cyber Monday to capitalize on early shoppers and those doing research beforehand.²

But don't forget about last-minute shoppers who start and finish their shopping in the weeks leading up to Christmas and beyond. They'll be looking for offers that provide convenience like click and carry, BOPIS and same-day delivery. In 2019, BOPIS revenue for the holiday season increased 55% over the seasonal average in the week before Christmas.³ Why? Shoppers needed their purchases to arrive before the holidays.

After December 25, 68% of consumers plan to keep shopping for gifts and product exchanges.⁴ Another 51% plan on taking advantage of sales and promotions to shop for themselves.⁵ That's why your campaign should run before Cyber Week and extend throughout the entire holiday season.⁶

Optimize keywords, ads and bids

- ✓ Set up the relevant ad extensions to drive more traffic.
- ✓ Test new ad copy variations.
- ✓ Set bids in anticipation of increased competition during the seasonal peaks.
- ✓ Apply auto-bidding strategies to take advantage of key audiences.
- ✓ Set up automated rules to schedule and automate your top campaign management tasks on a weekly, or even daily, basis for invaluable time savings and efficiency gains.

- ✓ Optimize your keywords and ads by testing Dynamic Search Ads and Responsive Search Ads.

Optimize Shopping Campaigns

- ✓ Schedule Merchant Promotions and Flyer Extensions to display relevant sitewide or category-specific offers and top products.
- ✓ Refresh your product feed daily.
- ✓ Send your full product feed with all product offers. Search query trends can change quickly, so ensure your products are eligible to serve as traffic fluctuates.
- ✓ Go beyond the required attributes and populate your feed with as many recommended attributes as possible, including GTIN, MPN, brand, size, color, shipping cost, and multiple images (up to 10 additional).
- ✓ Use Local Inventory Ads to promote in-store products and include the Curbside Pickup badge, if applicable.
